YOU CAN ALWAYS COUNT ON THE TOURINFORM OFFICES

One pleasant, summer morning, an intrepid traveller e-mailed his local Tourinform office to see if they could help him find a place to moor his canoe, but unfortunately, he had already set off before the office could e-mail him back. The Tourinform member of staff tried in vain to send him a reply, but the canoeist was already on the water without internet access, and all the staff member got back was an automated message. But did she give up? Of course not! She looked through previous correspondence and found a telephone number for the traveller, who was surprised and extremely grateful to receive the phone call. Together, they were able to clarify the route and the traveller's expected time of arrival, and he was promised information on mooring options by the afternoon. The Tourinform member of staff then put together the requested material for the stretch of water all the way to Tiszasüly and Tiszaroff, and the traveller was so grateful to receive it that he even sent photos of his wonderful trip to the office staff to say thank you. This is just the kind of experience that makes doing our job worthwhile, striving every day to do everything with the best of intentions and to the very best of our knowledge.
